MemHT Portal 3.8.1

Surprise! Ok, i suppose you think i'm crazy, and maybe (?) it's true :)

Some of you have noticed that the virtual addons feature in the 3.8.0 release was incomplete, or better, it was spartan. Because of this i decided to back to work and enhance it (i have a very very big headache now and i'm very very tired).

I've created a virtual addons engine that permit to install and update addons, from local files or remotelly, with 1 click. The file has a XML form and is universal. With this i mean that can be used to install and update addons, and in the future other components too (blocks, mods etc), it's modular. The new XML installer file permit to include instructions shown to the user during the installation or update process, PHP code that can be executed during those processes (so you can create database tables, files etc), description and so on.

I've created a tutorial that explains shortly the XML installer file, i hope you'll find it understandable:

This is a minor release, it has only 1 new feature and 2 small fixes, but i thought the virtual addons was enough to release it, because in the next future i want to dedicate my time in developing addons, and creating them before the new virtual addons engine would have no sense.
